

Is the think-tank gone?

For heaven's sake, no! The Think-Tank is me!

It's the think-tank in my head that's created everything and keeps me evolving. That's why this phase of my life feels so Steampunk. In fact, I even have a box filled with cogs and gears, ready to decorate my everyday clothes at any moment.

Music, writing, painting, tech, and mechanics—these are my passions. Outside of those areas, I admit, I'm pretty useless. It's taken me 10 months to pull everything together, completing all my projects and platforms, but each day there's a new design tweak, a new puzzle piece to fit in.

I love writing and making music, and with AI as my hybrid studio, I can do it full-time. But I also love drawing, painting, and creating designs that communicate my feelings or share the ideas swirling inside my head. I could paint or design full-time too, but I actually love being an author, and I know one day I'll write a bestseller. Maybe not today, but someday!

If I committed to being a full-time author, it might happen sooner, but then I'd miss out on building gadgets and solving technical puzzles. I get so much joy from creating mechanical things, tinkering with ideas.

-Being a Think-Tank is who I am.
